

Who is this community for?

This members-only community is for athletic trainers involved or interested in the many facets of educating the athletic trainers of today and tomorrow. No matter the setting or credential, all who identify as an educationalist or are interested in the mission of the AT EducATionalist Community to be the principal source for professional communication, expression, deliberation, advocacy and leadership for athletic training education and educationalists, are welcomed to join.

What is it?

This community is a formal space and place for AT educationalists to connect and discuss AT educational issues, policy and practice, proposal and movement. It is the medium for you to have a voice and to be heard. It is also the place for NATA members to communicate, collaborate and engage with like-minded and focused professionals on potential research projects, best practices in AT education and other creative or solution-driven initiatives for the betterment of AT educationalists.

There is no better time than the present to join the AT EducATionalist Community, and talk with fellow educationalists and those with a passion for education about the issues impacting you. There are three steps to take to get involved in the community: join, enter and act.

READY TO JOIN? HERE'S HOW!

1

Join the community

Log in to the NATA website (nata.org).

Once logged in, go to 'My Account' and click 'Edit My Profile.' Scroll down and enter the data shown under the 'AT EducATionalist Demographic Data' block, and click 'Save.' This will officially enter you into the community.

2

You're in!

Now that you've joined, log in to Gather (gather.nata.org) and enter the AT EducATionalist Community.

3

Act

The 'Home' page will show you the latest discussion threads and current members. Click 'Discussion' to see all threads. You can contribute to a current discussion or start your own thread.

